Let us dream - The path to a better future is the title of a little book by Pope Francis as he reflects on the these last months affected by the Covid 19 pandemic. At times it has seemed that people were rediscovering important things during the extended lockdown we have experienced - things like the value of family time together, the appreciation of those in our society who are very often the most needed and the least rewarded, such as those who care for the sick and elderly and those who keep the essential services functioning. These thoughts should lead us to reassess our own lives and our understanding of how we and our world can actually learn some beneficial lessons from this crisis. The danger is, that as we are drawing towards the end of the immediate danger, we will all eagerly 'go back to normal'. That phrase is actually a drawing back from any of the positive lessons which we might have learnt. What is 'normal'? It is often all the wrong things we've done before.

Pope Francis identifies all this in his book. Here is a little taste of it —

“It is moments like these, when we feel a radical powerlessness....that we come to our senses and see the selfishness of the culture in which we are immersed, that denies the best of who we are. And if, at such moments, we repent, and look back to our Creator and to each other, we might remember the truth that God put in our hearts; that we belong to Him and to each other.

Perhaps, because we have recovered, in lockdown, a little of that fraternity our hearts had painfully missed, many of us have begun to feel an impatient hope that maybe the world could be organised differently, to reflect that truth.

We have neglected and mistreated our ties with the Creator, with creation, and with our fellow creatures. But the good news is that an Ark awaits us to carry us to a new tomorrow. Covid 19 is our Noah moment, as long as we can find our way to the Ark of the ties that unite us; of love, and of a common belonging.

The Noah story in Genesis is not just about how God offered a path out of destruction, but about all that followed. The regeneration of human society meant a return to respecting limits, curbing the reckless pursuit of wealth and power, looking out for the poor and those living on the edges. The introduction of the Sabbath and the Jubilee - moments of recovery and reparation, forgiving debts and restoring relationships - were key to that regeneration, giving time for the earth to bounce back, for the poor to find fresh hope, for people to find their souls again.

That is the grace available to us now; the light in the midst of our tribulation. Let us not throw it away.
